How to Use the Outage Map

This map shows the approximate service area boundaries for the electric utilities in Texas that maintain an outage map on their website.

To view your utility's outage map or to find your utility's contact information for reporting an outage on your computer, simply hover over the location of your residence on the map and left-click:

MOBILE PHONE USERS: To access this information from your mobile device, simply click on the location of your residence.

An information box(es) that contains your utility's contact information and a link to their outage map will appear.

The service area boundaries were, in part, purchased from a commercial source and are not a result of digitizing the Commission's existing official paper maps. The service area boundaries are not official and should be considered approximate only.
